HONGKONG, JANUARY BIST, 1877.

Ir is a failure common to the major portion of manifind to shik the examination of things disagrecable and uninviting, to take on trust that which we feel a disinclination to inquire about. The maxim that "where ignorance is bliss is folly to be win," is widely believed in and the general pactice ignorance, if blissful is also foolish and injurious. Indeed, it may be accepted as a lievers in the blies ofignorance. But a good many fastidious folks are likewise strongly some subjects. Noubly this is the case with regard to the preparation of the swoury viands which appearon their tables. Some They will resignedly tell you that they know controversy it is not, of course, our intention in the sum of $200. they have to consum their "peck," but pray exceeding it. In England, too, there is nothing to is urged | was a good one and a pleasant evening was against pursuing it. When you dine at spent. This Comprehensive Work, now in the home you are tolerably sure that your food is clean and wholesome, and when you are compelled to dine at a public restaurant you Sources, and no pains have been spired to can only hope for the best. As a rule cleabliness is sorupulously observed in all respectable places of the kind, for these houses have a reputation to uphold, and English cookswhatever their other shortcomings-are usually careful in this particular. Here in China we have not, unfortunately, this entisfaction. The Chinese cook is clean only on com- not sufficient to cover the costs plaintiff was pulsion. Hois not a bad cujamier, but his mode hart at being non-suited, and wished to have of operation is not of a character to invite frequent inspection, His work is carried on in a dark and dingy hole, into which so light enters save from the door, and there among why Mr. B. wier's wife or anybody selec's wife the pots and pans he does just what he pleases, superintending the process, which most frequently undertaken by his assistants or "learn pidgins." That he dirty is an undisputed fact, that he is a cheat is equally well known, and with this mecomfortable knowledge Europeans not, however, he generally known that the neglected condition into which the cooking utonails are allowed to fall not only spoils the taste of the food but in some eases produces overy householder to make periodical incarsions into the cook-house, and inspect the cooking apparatus, even at the risk of spoiling his appetite for a few days afterwards. Such visits have a salutary effect, though they may result in a general smash up of the pots and paus and a rumpus with the presiding genius of the umoky precinct. It is somewhat surprising that the und had ste not paid something into Court he to the Bank, residents here should have adopted the native style instead of teaching the Chinese the European methods of cooking. Why for instance, should not the European cook-, ing apparatus be introduced here? Why should not the Chinese be taught to observe cleanliness as a concomitant to good cooking? Some reform, at all events, is needed, for the ways of the native are cortainly dark and dirty. But it is to be feared that " slo custom" would not admit of any very radical innovation, and the only remedy that appears feasible at present is to make frequent raids upon the cook-house and to insist upon the cooking vessels being often and theroughly

When a disease such as tois appears with more than average violence, the feelings of the natives must be set aside in favour of the health of the community. It is not our place to indicate the necessary measures. It is sufficient to point out that the indifference as yet exhibited has resulted in allowing the disease to enter buildings which it might have been expected to pass by. The houses of lew European cities are better constructed as regards ventilation and distance from insaultary centres than those of Hongkong. On the other hand, our system of domestic servitude rather invites than repels diseases Coolie quarters are, as a rule, crowded and uncleanly, and this remark applies to many of the best built European houses in the woman, who abused him. ESSAY ON THE MOTH BY A SERTIMENTAL MATURALIST. Oh, the gay giddy moth is a child of the eir That exults in the breezes of symmer. Tie just at the senson when blossoms are fair That we had with delight the new-conter. Nor daylight alone to the rover is dear; for by night—which is rather imprudent—
It glads him to hover unpleasantly near — To the topor that burns for the student. ... Oh, it is not alone to the sumbine above That the wanderer flies for enjoyment; No-c'er for the collage he mittages a love of And the palace may find him corployment. Unbonded and quiet he likes to ropose Amid heres of respectable mineuts In solitude ecting his way as he goes, With impunity as to the payment, But alas! there are beings remorseless enough To convey to the place of their dwelling, Tohuco and lavender, camphor and anult. Which he soon grows a weary of andling. Ah, who could behave in this barbarous with If he felt-as I feel to my sorrow-How oft the pour victim who revels to-day Is unsure of a meal for to-murrowl s. I have suffered, how long, from the gay girldy meth, And have pined from his rathless excesses. A scallow-inited garmont of daintiest cloth is the miniicat of all my distresses. Sad loss !-- I would gladly have tried to devote All the means in my pow'r to swold it-.But I trust the poor creature enjoyed it!
